

811 is a nationwide phone number in the United States designed to help prevent accidental damage to underground utility lines during digging projects. It's the first step in the safe digging process.

Paws on the Job: Activity Book

Color the house, sky, trees and grass but don't forget the flags in the yard. Those flags have meaning. They tell you a buried utility is underground. Color some red for electric and some yellow for gas. Orange is for TV and internet. Blue is for water and green is for sewer.

Safety is always important!

Hardhats, gloves, safety vests and work boots help protect those that are busy digging. Color all of them with bright colors so others can see them clearly.

It's A-MAZE-ING

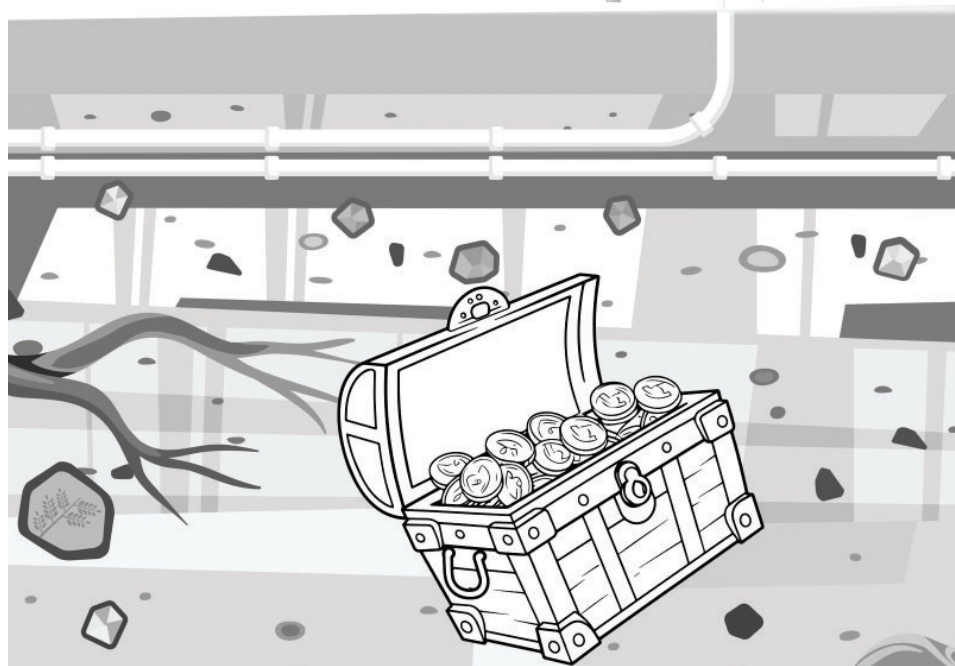

Our friend, the construction worker dog, has been working hard all morning building a new playground. Now it's time for his lunch break, but he's lost his way to his favorite bone! Can you help him find the path through the maze to his delicious lunch bone at the end?

Get ready to add some color to our awesome construction worker pup! He's building something amazing. Thanks to 811, no accidents occurred.

Adventure awaits as you dig for treasure, but beware of hidden dangers underground! Always contact 811 to check for buried utilities before you start digging.
